Text: John always found living in the city overwhelming. The noise, the traffic, and the constant rush made it hard for him to enjoy quiet moments. He often felt stuck in traffic and unwilling to spend money on expensive entertainment. Instead, he preferred simple pleasures, like eating peanuts or reading books. One day, he decided to turn the page and move to the countryside. There, he discovered a registry office that helped him start a new business. His main source of income became selling inventory from local farms, and he finally felt his efforts were well spent.

Questions (2 points each):

1. Why did John find living in the city overwhelming?
2. What simple pleasures did John enjoy?
3. What decision did John make to change his life?
4. What became John's main source of income?
5. How did John feel about his efforts in the countryside?
